

RETURNS JEWELS TO EINSTEIN HOME AND GOES TO CELL

Grauvogel Insists He Bought
Them from Missing Butler in Good Faith.

John Grauvogel, the middle-aged man who called at the home of William Einstein at No. 121 East Fifty-seventh street last night to return $2,000 worth of the jewelry stolen on Tuesday by a servant, and who was held by members of the family until detectives arrived, was arraigned in the Tombs today charged with receiving stolen goods. Though he protests he bought the jewelry from Robert Becker, until recently a butler in the Einstein household, and asserts he did not believe the articles stolen, the police are skeptical because they are all engraved with Mr. Einstein's initials.

Mrs. Einstein asserted against Grauvogel. She testified that he had returned only about $2,000 worth of the missing jewelry and that the more valuable gems of the collection were still missing. She explained that Becker, the missing butler, had familiarized himself with the home the first three days after he was employed and on the fourth had made a collection on every room in the house in about twenty minutes and had run away.

Detective Accuses Grauvogel.

Detective Van Twiesten told Magistrate Hoffman he was satisfied that Grauvogel had arranged with Becker to take the less valuable jewels back to the Einstein and make a check for returning them. The police have learned that Becker went to Chicago and Van Twiesten said Grauvogel had made arrangements for a surreptitious communication with Becker to let him know how the deal came out.

Grauvogel insisted he bought the jewelry without knowing it was stolen and took it to the Einstein home as soon as he read of the robbery in the German newspapers. He was held for trial in $5,000 bail.

Grauvogel rang the bell at the Einstein home last night at the dinner hour and told the new butler he desired to return some valuable property to the head of the house. Mrs. Einstein was called. From a suit case he carried Grauvogel produced a jewel case which she instantly recognized as one of the stolen articles. Excusing herself for a moment Mrs. Einstein told a maid to call up the East Fifty-first street station.

Held Him for Police.

She then returned and asked Grauvogel to tell his story. Other members of the family and the servants stood around to see that he didn't slip out of the house. The man told a number of the stolen articles out on a table in the drawing room. All were identified by Mrs. Einstein. Grauvogel said that he had bought them from Becker on Tuesday night for $150. He had known Becker for six months, having met him in a German cafe.

He said Becker had called at his home, No. 117 First avenue, on Tuesday night with a gunny sack full of jewelry. Grauvogel explained that he is a jewelry salesman in the winter and a painter in the summer. That was why Becker had come to him.

While he was telling his story Detective Gossler, Van Twiesten, Bruckman and McIntosh, of the East Fifty-first street station arrived. They took him to police headquarters. There he repeated his story. When asked if the $2,000 cat's-eye pin, which was stolen, had been offered him for sale by Becker he replied it had. He said that Becker had offered it for $5, but that he had refused to buy it, fearing that it had been stolen. Becker told him that he was earning $30 a week and could afford to indulge his taste for jewelry.

Butler's Loot $8,000.

The total value of the stolen jewelry was placed by Mrs. Einstein at $8,000. The articles returned by Grauvogel were as follows:

One embossed silver jewel box, one silver carving knife, one pair of silver scissors and sheath for them, one silver magnifying glass with an embossed case, one gold watch safe, one gold watch, three enameled gold Russian spoons, two gold cigar cutters, two gold stickpins, three gold pencils, one small gold watch set in a miniature hanjo, two round gold boxes, one locket of gold set with a small watch inside and set with brilliant valued at $500, two gold charms, one gold chain, three pairs of gold cuff buttons, one tie clip and six studs.

BROOKLYN POLICE HEADQUARTERS IS RATED 'FIRE TRAP'

Grand Jury Committee Condemns Flimsy Structure
After Inspection.

The five-story brick former factory building on State street, near Smith, in which Brooklyn Police Headquarters is housed was today denounced as a dangerous firetrap by a committee of the Kings County Grand Jury, which thoroughly inspected the flimsy structure. The committee will recommend a presentation that a new fireproof building be erected as speedily as possible.

The investigation came about unexpectedly. The committee had called on Deputy Commissioner Reynolds to get first-hand knowledge of police headquarters. They were being shown through the building, when one of their number noticed the flimsy wooden partitions which separate the departments.

In the investigation that followed, the paint and varnish was scraped from the pine boards of the partitions and their tinder like condition was revealed. The Grand Jurors climbed up and down the narrow stairways, examined the insufficient protection for important records and poked their heads out of the windows to see the inadequate fire escapes. There are only two fire escapes on the building, one in the rear, which was there when the Police Department took possession, and another which was put up a short time ago, after a year long fight by the newspapermen, who, until recently, occupied a room in the building.

The Grand Jury committee was amazed at the conditions which their inspection revealed, and condemned the partitioning which exposed such an important branch of the municipal government to danger from fire. One of the committee members said he could not see how any one could escape from the building in case fire should attack the wooden partitions, which are on every floor, without jumping. The records could not be saved at all.

Deputy Commissioner Reynolds would make no comment on the investigation.

TO PROBE TOMBS GRAFT.

Judge O'Sullivan Sees Lawyers
Who Fleeced Prisoners.

Judge O'Sullivan in Part I. of General Sessions today instructed the Grand Jury to inquire into a form of graft in the Tombs prison that had been called to his attention.

"From time immemorial," said Judge O'Sullivan, "the keepers in the Tombs have made a practice of steering cases to certain lawyers. For this sort of thing they are paid liberally. This form of graft has been on the increase lately and some measures should be taken to check it."

"Within the past month several cases have been called to my attention in which prisoners have been fleeced by unscrupulous lawyers working in conjunction with the Tombs keepers." The Court said that he had gathered certain evidence which he would present to the Grand Jury and he hoped that indictments would follow.

FIVE YEARS FOR ARSON.

Convicted of arson in the second degree, Max Goldberg, of No. 125 Washington street, Brooklyn, was today sentenced to a term of not more than five years in Sing Sing by Justice Kelly in the Brooklyn Supreme Court.

Goldberg's second fire occurred on the night of June 20, 1900. When the gas-lamp flared up, he made a dash for the street, but mislaid the show window for the door. The crash of breaking glass attracted the attention of Police-man Quelly of the Adams street station, who called out the apparatus and took in Goldberg. Shortly before this event, there was a fire at a store he was running at No. 141 Court street, Brooklyn, but at the Marshal's investigation Goldberg swore that it was due to a gas explosion.

SIGHTLESS GIRL GIVES A LESSON IN CHEERFULNESS

Miss Opydyke, Blind Stenographer, Shows How Milton, Might Have Been Happier.

Persons who snarl about pin prices and fret if they miss a street car would have received a valuable lesson last night had they attended a concert given at St. Bartholomew's Lyceum, No. 30 East Forty-second street, by the Blind Women's Club in aid of the fund to provide summer vacations for blind girls. A wonderful lesson in cheerfulness was presented by Miss Emily Opydyke, a blind stenographer, who read Milton's "Lycidas" on the organ, "Blindness" from a large book of Braille type and who philosophized upon the great poet's gloomy outlook on life as the result of his blindness.

It is clear," the blind girl said, "that Milton has put in September month all his own suffering and dread on account of his blindness, but I am sure had the great poet known our motto, 'Light Through Work,' he would not have been so discouraged. Perhaps you and I cannot see, but should that cause us to grieve and make others unhappy? We can work and find happiness in the effort. Blind men and women can become good and useful citizens and their affliction is not one that deserves only pity. Help and encouragement and a friendly slap on the back are better than pity."

Miss Opydyke is considered to be the cleverest stenographer in an office which employs a number of girls with perfect eyesight. She takes dictation from the photograph and operates her machine by the sense of touch.

SOCIETY SECTION TO BE INVADDED BY APARTMENT HOUSE

$2,000,000 Structure to Be Erected at Fifth Avenue and Seventy-second Street.

An apartment house, which its promoters declare will be one of the finest in existence, is to be erected at Fifth avenue and Seventy-second street, the centre of one of the most aristocratic sections of the city. Owners of private dwellings in the vicinity are said to be surprised at the proposed invasion of a section which it was thought would remain devoted to residences for many years to come.

The apartment house will be erected by a company of which James A. Hurst, probably will be elected president. It will have a frontage of 115 feet on Fifth avenue and 125 feet on Seventy-second street. The total estimated cost of the land and building is $2,000,000.

The plans for the structure, which are being prepared by Architect Cass Gilbert, will provide for some unique features. The most striking will be a series of private elevators running directly to private apartments. There also will be a glass covered court in the centre. The apartments will be constructed so that whole floors can be rented, and prospective tenants who may desire to occupy two entire floors will be privileged to arrange for them while the plans are in preparation.

Among prominent persons occupying private houses on Seventy-second street near the site of the proposed building are James Stillman, W. Bayard Cutting, William V. S. Thorne, Samuel Keyser and Mrs. Hugh J. Grant.

ECZEMA CURE A BEAUTY WASH

Although D. D. D. Prescription has been recognized for years as the one remedy for Eczema, Psoriasis and all other forms of skin diseases, it is now known that there is no other wash, even those used by the beauty specialists, that can compare with this mild liquid for cleansing the skin of pimples, black-heads, rash, and all similar skin affections.

For this reason alone, a bottle of D. D. D. should be kept on hand in every household. A trial 25c. bottle will show you the merits of this great remedy as a complexion wash.

D. D. D. seems to remove the cause whatever the trouble may be, cleansing the skin and leaving it as soft, as smooth and clear as that of a healthy child.

Get a 25c. bottle to-day and keep it in the house.
